A Report from the Directors

Alberta Opportunity Company's 1986/87 year is proof that the entrepreneurial spirit is indeed alive and well in this province.

Over the past year an increased demand for AOC financial and management assistance in all sectors of the economy enabled us to help launch 105 new businesses and breathe new life into 283 existing companies. In total, we were able to support the employment of 2,295 Albertans across the province.

Behind this eventful year lay an optimistic attitude on the part of Alberta's entrepreneurs. Their unremitting drive for achievement prompted AOC to expand some services, while maintaining others to ensure the important business advances and achievements necessary to position Alberta for the future.

A record number of new loans in 1986/87 reflects the growing confidence and ability of Alberta's entrepreneurs in establishing new enterprises or expanding existing businesses. AOC approved a record 388 new loans, up from 317 in fiscal 1986 and increased approved funding from $23.0 million in 1985/86 to $34.2 million this past fiscal year. The service and manufacturing sectors continued to be important areas of activity.

W. Paul Lefaiivre, Chairman and Roy Parker, President and Managing Director

As always, our focus was on independent Alberta business people who could help the province's economy. Ross and Lorna Uibel of Mountain View are just two of many who in 1986/87 maintained a strong position by expanding their retail operation with an $80,000 AOC loan. Starting out with a $56,000 AOC loan in 1974, their company, Caribou Clothes Ltd., has increased sales of sheepskin and leather coats and accessories from $115,200 to over $1 million in the past 13 years.

Many successfully established businesses can pursue further profits through market expansion. Initiatives to assist these efforts have been an important part of AOC's mandate since its inception. In 1986, a commitment was made to expand this program. The new commitment would provide successful businesses with up to $150,000 in additional working capital, when traditional lenders are not an option.

Students aspiring to become entrepreneurs continued to come to AOC for assistance in 1986/87. The student loan program provided 229 young people with funding of $101,990 to start up 40 small businesses. This very successful initiative enabled students like Brian Honeymen of Calgary and his 11 employees to finance their educations. Brian's College Pro Painters achieved $67,000 in gross sales in the summer of 1986.

There's also a growing demand from mature students and potential entrepreneurs interested in launching their own companies. In response, AOC has developed a first-of-its-kind seminar, "Making Your Ideas Work", taking place in early 1987.

1986/87 was also a year for innovative financing solutions to complex loan requirements. AOC established its venture capital program to provide funds — mainly $1 million or less — to the high tech, tourism and manufacturing sectors. The Alberta Opportunity Company utilizes repayment and profit participation plans suited to each client's needs. Two such investments in the past fiscal year saw $1.3 million advanced to a geological service firm and a developer of unique drilling equipment for world wide export.

Serving some 800 clients in the past six years, 55 per cent of those over the last two years, the Consulting Services Department has expanded its activities to meet the needs of existing and new customers. A staff of five consultants is now available to provide business and management advice in the marketing, retail merchandising, accounting and finance, manufacturing and production and building construction areas to AOC customers from across Alberta.

The 1986/87 year saw an ongoing demand for more involved, detailed assignments in Alberta. Consultants provided assistance to some 200 clients, mainly in the marketing and retail merchandising industries.

As an example, a manufacturer of home packages sought out our services to determine a complete marketing strategy — including market identification, distribution strategy, advertising and promotions — over a seven month period. When another client, an auto dealership, approached us to develop a program to monitor customer satisfaction, we were also able to help them market their shop services.

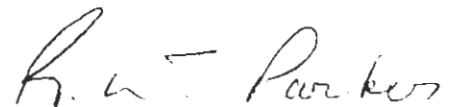

In brief, the need and demand for AOC services has never been greater.

AOC's board of directors, management and employees look forward to offering whatever assistance we can to continue such a positive outlook in 1987/88. As we have for 15 years, we will continue to build on a successful past and to pursue whatever innovative programs and services are required by this province's entrepreneurs to make Alberta an even more promising place to live, work and succeed.

ENTERPRISE

“Even without an established market for our services, AOC believed in our idea, provided the funds at an interest rate we could live with, and gave us advice to help achieve our dream of a new industry for Alberta.”

FEN ROESSINGH, CUSTOM WOOLEN MILLS LTD., CARSTAIRS

Wool marketing was almost unheard of in Alberta prior to 1977 for two reasons: wool finishing costs demanded uncompetitive prices, and most producers were more interested in marketing their mutton for profit. Then came Custom Woolen Mills Ltd. with an innovative cost-cutting idea that would have a dramatic impact on the province's wool trade. Fen Roessingh and husband Bill Purvis-Smith of Carstairs convinced AOC they could offer producers custom wool finishing services at half the retail cost. They'd do it by equipping their 9,008 square foot plant with inexpensive, refurbished, low maintenance machinery.

Utilizing Fen's extensive European background in spinning and weaving, and a $93,000 AOC loan, they've launched, not only a unique enterprise, but a whole new industry for Alberta and the western provinces.

Now, only 10 years later, the company is the largest custom mill in Canada with annual sales reaching $250,000. They offer the most complete range of custom services, from washing, carding, twisting, spinning, dyeing and quilting, to sheepskin tanning and sewing. Their customers come from across Canada and as far south as Arizona.

With the production of its own yarns, troying, wool filled comforters, mattress overlays and quilt bats, Custom Woolen Mills plans to do even more for wool production in Western Canada with a future move into the retail market.

“AOC saw the potential of my husband's knowledge in the autobody field and how keen we were to make it work. They quickly became part of our team, helping us to prepare proposals and projections and looking out for things we couldn't see.”

PEGGY HARRIS, TOUCH OF CLASS AUTOBODY LTD., PEACE RIVER

Few companies launching a new operation in northern Alberta during the early 1980's can boast a 66% increase in sales and an improvement in their profit margin over the past four years. So far that is the happy fate of Touch of Class Autobody Ltd., a general auto repair company based in Peace River, with a shop in High Level. Started with a $25,000 AOC loan in 1982, the company's sales have jumped from $249,000 to $751,000 in 1986.

Owners Glen and Peggy Harris attribute these impressive figures to the timing of their shop construction in the two northern Alberta towns - a decision AOC had a great deal of input on.

The Harris' were initially turned down on their request for funding to develop their own shop facilities because, Peggy admits, “AOC knew the timing wasn't right and advised us to continue to lease until the real estate market settled.” AOC approved a $130,000 loan in 1985 and a $156,000 loan in 1986 to enable the company to eliminate high leasing costs. The Harris' built a 3,600 square foot, eight vehicle shop in Peace River and a 4,800 square foot, 12 vehicle shop in High Level. Now the couple has set their sights on expanding services to sandblasting and plan to offer a lifetime warranty on collision repair and one year warranty on all painting.

"AOC saw the potential that others couldn't and were willing to invest in our company when we were raising funds."

JIM YANG, FINANCE DIRECTOR, IDACOM ELECTRONICS LTD., EDMONTON

While the big players in the high tech race concentrate on developing more sophisticated computers, a highly specialized Edmonton electronics firm is staking out its own profitable niche, developing, manufacturing and marketing high performance test equipment that can tap into and find bugs in any data communications network. The "Protocol Tester", developed by Walter Stein, Bill Davis, Ken Wall and Horst Depner, can be used to monitor, emulate, simulate or certify a system.

Since their company, IDACOM Electronics Ltd., obtained its first AOC $300,000 loan to assist in the purchase of the product prototype, they have developed and sold five different models of the $20,000 to $35,000 equipment to markets in Europe, the Netherlands, Japan, Hong Kong, Thailand, Singapore, Australia, and across North America. Sales have increased tenfold since the company started operations, 100 per cent in 1986 alone.

With the first loan paid out, AOC and the electronics company have a second $381,922 financing agreement that will enable IDACOM to pursue a new high performance tester for the data centre and service application. IDACOM believes that this will bring four times their current international sales.

“Without AOC we’d only be a service company sending money and jobs outside of the province instead of bringing them in.”

GARY WANNAMAKER, P.R.E.S. AIR DISTRIBUTORS LTD., CALGARY

Up until three years ago if a western Canadian company needed a high volume air pump to operate at low pressure, they typically waited for months on parts from the East and then waited again to have it assembled. P.R.E.S. Air Distributors Ltd. of Calgary thought their customers deserved better and came up with an idea to turn their service company into a manufacturing outlet for the “Rotary Positive Displacement Blower” in 1983.

With the help of AOC consultants, owner Gary Wannamaker zeroed in on his initial market — trucking companies licensed to haul dry bulk products — and hasn’t looked back since. Over the past three years he has turned to AOC for advice on how to set up his 3,500 square foot plant for maximum efficiency, on computerization of his operation, and on further markets for his product. And in 1985 AOC provided his bank with a $20,000 guarantee on a $60,000 operating loan.

Today, P.R.E.S. Air Distributors is selling over $1 million a year in blowers to western Canada, the United States and as far east as Montreal through eight distributors. They are manufacturing nine different models which are being purchased by trucking companies, sewage treatment plants and by the agricultural, oil and gas industries for $1,900 to $8,000 a unit. In 1987 alone sales jumped 60 per cent after the introduction of the company’s new agricultural model.

Now, with the help of AOC’s marketing advice, Mr. Wannamater plans to get even more aggressive in the U.S. and Canadian markets by adding yet more models within each industry served.

“It’s a unique and creative financing arrangement, because repayment is based on sales. With this excellent program for a company our size, we plan to respond to the market for all its worth and AOC is helping us do it.”

LARRY FIKOWSKI, SIERRA DRILLING LTD., MEDICINE HAT

Sierra Drilling Ltd. of Medicine Hat is a small company with big plans. The company, with 5.5 million in sales, has developed a low cost, high efficiency drilling rig that seems to be just what the doctor ordered for oil companies searching for cost saving measures. And owners Dennis Comm. Larry Fikowski and Robert Edwards, with the help of AOC, have every intention of exploiting their edge on the competition by maximizing marketing efforts for both drilling contracting and slant hole rig sales.

Based in the western Canadian market, but already making international sales to South American countries like Venezuela, the ten-year-old company has entered into a venture agreement with AOC for $500,000 to pursue further international sales. Sierra is negotiating the sale of one of its $3.5 million slant hole rigs to the People’s Republic of China and has entered into a manufacturing agreement with an Edmonton rig producer to further consolidate their efforts in the sales and contracting areas.
