The NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL CONFERENCE BOARD

is the oldest research and educational institution for cooperative study of the economic and administrative problems of American business by economists and businessmen. It was founded in 1916 by associations representing twelve branches of industry. Its founders believed that the American voluntary competitive economy, founded on private property and individual liberty, is the one best suited to promote enduring human welfare, and that impartial fact finding and education will keep that system sound and healthy. These principles have been the basis of all the activities of THE CONFERENCE BOARD for forty years.

The Board is

Scientific. It assembles, analyzes, tests, explains and disseminates facts on human relations in industry, on business organization and operation, and on the basic structure and development of the national economy.

Educational. It conducts conferences and courses on important economic and industrial management problems. It makes its facilities and publications available, at nominal cost, to governmental departments and agencies, and to colleges. It regularly releases its findings to the press.

Nonprofit. It is not endowed, but is supported principally by voluntary contributions and annual subscriptions from large and small business concerns, labor unions, industrial organizations, libraries and individuals.

Wholly independent. It has never been a branch, affiliate, subsidiary, agency or department of any other organization or group, academic, professional, industrial, commercial or political.

Not a government agency. Although it includes appointed representatives of certain government departments and cooperates with government divisions in scientific work, the Board has no political affiliations and does not engage in legislative or political activity of any kind.

Not a trade association or employers' organization. It does not represent the interests of any particular fields or groups. The results of its research are available to persons and organizations in all branches of industry, trade and finance, to educators and to others in the professions, to labor unions and to all who are interested in its work and contribute to its maintenance.

I N LAST YEAR'S Annual Report, I spoke of some of the changes that have occurred in our economic and social environment since the founding of THE CONFERENCE BOARD in 1916. I then discussed the adjustment of the Board's research, conference, and educational activities to these changes. In this Report, which marks the completion of four decades of Conference Board service, I should like to examine briefly where industry finds itself today and to suggest some of the goals toward which it must strive if it is to play its part in fulfilling the hopes and dreams of our people and in assisting our neighbors abroad toward the realization of their aspirations. Finally, I shall have something to say about how THE CONFERENCE BOARD can help in reaching those goals.

First, where are we now? The answer to this question can be short and emphatic—the American people have attained standards of material well-being, of education, and of health that only four decades ago would have been considered utterly fantastic. These advances have also occurred in lesser degrees in other parts of the world—but it is significant that the greatest progress has been made in those areas where the economic philosophy most closely approaches the dynamic capitalism of the American economy. This fact suggests that we have developed an essential ingredient—something new and revolutionary—in the effort to lift people out of the slavery and poverty that have characterized so much of human existence in past centuries and to bring them within sight of a way of living that enshrines the worth, the dignity, and the integrity of the individual.

We Americans should not be too boastful about our accomplishments (as we sometimes tend to be) nor should we view them with any excess of humility. Our forefathers had, in addition to their sterling qualities, a large measure of good fortune. They came to a sparsely settled part of the world, rich in natural resources, with relatively few transportation barriers and possessing a climate that was both salubrious (for living) and stimulating (for working). There were few ingrained customs and practices to impede their progress. Their mother countries in Europe were so busy fighting among themselves or developing other colonies that they paid scant attention to the situation in America, a circumstance that encouraged the development of an independent spirit among an important segment of the American colonists.

Once the American Revolution was won, an American pattern began slowly to emerge. We were able to choose from the most advanced political thinking of the day and were blessed with statesmen of competence and character who laboriously hammered out an American Constitution. This document, which Gladstone called “the most wonderful work ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man,” had, in the words of a prominent historian, as its unique virtue “the device by which it secured the supremacy of the new federal government without destroying or absorbing the state governments.”

As admirably suited to the economic temper of the times as the Constitution was to the political temper was that great treatise of economic liberalism—“The Wealth of Nations.” Probably no other part of the world was in so advantageous a position to put into practice the theory of “laissez-faire” as was the newly organized United States. Consequently, for the greater part of the nineteenth century business operations were considered almost entirely outside of the responsibility of government. This lack of governmental interference provided a climate beneficial to the development, at the turn of the present century, of a strong, self-reliant "American business civilization."

As with any socio-economic development having such exceptional vitality, inequities and imbalances were bound to arise. Thus the period from about 1870 through the nineteen thirties might be characterized as one of increasing government attention to the national economy. The business institution continued to develop, but its growth, in itself, created certain problems that were outside its operations and were both beyond the responsibilities of individual managements and beyond their abilities to solve. These problems were properly in the province of government and could be coped with only through legislation in the fields of commerce, anti-trust, labor, finance, social security and in other areas.

In this same period, however, there was also developing a new concept of the social responsibilities in business itself. Starting with what one economist has termed the "notorious post-Civil War buccaneers," business developed progressively higher "standards of internal integrity, and of responsible management in respect to the other interests concerned."

Today, as a nation, we are also more prosperous than ever before. And, as I said in the foreword to the Board's most recent Annual Chart Book: "Each day it seems that a higher goal of potential achievement is held before the American public. Long-range plans built upon these projections can be found in the top drawer of the desks of American management across the country." More people are at work, under better working conditions, with more leisure, and at higher wages than at any time in the past. More than three out of four of our families have incomes over $2,500 a year, and more than two out of five have incomes of better than $5,000. Our national wealth has been estimated at well over a trillion dollars. Even after allowance for the erosion of inflation, our wealth has grown much faster than our population so that over the past four decades our real reproducible wealth, on a per capita basis, has increased almost 50%.

Can we in the decades ahead maintain or even excel the progress of the past? To repeat what I have said elsewhere—"no natural law dictates that future growth must follow simply because most of our growth patterns of the past have been strong. Political, moral, social, and other institutional and environmental changes can play havoc with the most firmly entrenched trend line.”

As to our future goals, there are a host of economic problems that we shall have to be solving if we are to maintain our progress. From where we stand now, it seems to me that two are of overriding significance. One is the problem of controlling inflation; the other is the problem of establishing mutually beneficial economic relationships with other countries and their peoples. If these two problems can be solved, I believe we can continue to build on firm ground. On the other hand, if either of them is ignored or allowed to drift, it could be that this country is approaching the end of its own Golden Age.

So far as inflation is concerned, we cannot lose sight of the fact that since the late thirties the purchasing power of the dollar has declined by nearly one half. Nor can we be complacent about our present situation. The trillion-plus in national wealth that I mentioned earlier is today accompanied by a total debt estimated at $650 billion, plus hidden debt commitments of the guaranteed or welfare type that are simply impossible to estimate in dollar terms. There is always the danger of pressure to lighten so large a debt burden by more and still more inflation. Confidence in the soundness of our money has already been weakened in the past two decades; it would be tragic to have that confidence degenerate further.

Of equal importance is the place that the United States is to hold among the nations of the world. If we look far into the future, all of us must recognize that there must develop a much better understanding not only between us and the nations who can be considered our friends and allies, but also between us and the neutralist nations, and even between us and those nations whose totalitarian philosophies are distinctly alien to our own. And, as Erwin Canham pointed out in his recent address at the Board's Fortieth Annual Meeting, there are three stages to communication that can promote this understanding. First, we must think hard and decide what it is we have to communicate. Second, we must articulate it clearly and graphically. Third, we must learn to listen to others. Mr. Canham went on to say:

“The biggest, perhaps the toughest problem of communication which we face is to persuade a significant part of the world that the economic system which we operate offers them, in what they can derive from it, the greatest and best solution of their problems. This is not to assert that any other people could or should operate precisely the same economic or political system that we have. They will operate the kind of system which is suitable to their needs and their aptitudes, and which they are capable of operating.

“Our economy is as much the result of our long historical experience as our policy, but our economic system, adapted to the capacities and the conditions of peoples elsewhere, has within it great liberating universal values for them. From the demonstration which we have been able to make, other peoples can select enough to start them along the road that will ultimately lead to the kind of freedom they are capable of administering, in contrast to the road that inevitably goes over the hill into totalitarianism.”

Developments in transportation and communication have changed, and promise to continue to change, the world environment in which we Americans must live. The example of our own American Revolution and the development of Western ideas about the integrity of the individual have made a strong impression on many peoples throughout the world. As civilization has pushed forward its frontiers and educational levels have risen, more and more of these peoples have obtained or are pressing for their own independence.

We must hope that the prediction of the eminent historian Arnold Toynbee will be fulfilled when he said “Our age will be remembered not for its horrifying crimes or its astonishing inventions, but because it is the first age since the dawn of history in which mankind dared to believe it practicable to make the benefits of civilization available to the whole human race."

But we must also realize that while these benefits are being so widely extended, the disparity between the highest and the relatively low living standards of the overwhelming bulk of the world's people is actually increasing. This brings about tremendous problems in the relationships between the peoples of the world—problems that were less frequently brought to the surface when colonialism was a dominant force. Foreign trade and foreign investment are immensely more complicated than they were a few short decades ago.

American industry is making tremendous efforts to solve these international problems on the economic front, and I believe that it is this private sector that offers real hope for future world understanding. We cannot cajole, bribe, or force others to accept our ways of living. But the American investor abroad can show, and is showing, other nationals the advantages they can derive from the integration of modern dynamic capitalism into their various economies. Beside performance, he is also bringing with him the same sense of community responsibility that he feels in his domestic operations. If, as another speaker at our Fortieth Annual Meeting pointed out, "we can continue and expand this interchange of skills, capital, resources and good will, we may yet be able to attain the kind of economic partnership that will increase the material well-being of all peoples and provide the basis for a lasting peace."

The Role of the Board

In connection with the Board's celebration of its Fortieth Anniversary this year, I had occasion to review some of its earlier Annual Reports. I was struck with the fact that President Magnus Alexander's description of the Board in its Tenth Annual Report, thirty years ago, so exactly describes its activities today. It is a tribute to the soundness of the concept on which the Board was based that we can still say, in Mr. Alexander's words, "The National Industrial Conference Board is an organization in which American industries are associated for the common purpose of promoting the stability and prosperity of industrial America. It is a cooperative effort in which the judgment and experience of the country's executives are pooled for the common benefit of all industry. The Board is, in fact, industry's own organization for cooperative intellectual endeavor and practical economic planning."

This description of the Board almost exactly parallels my own in last year's report. In other words, the basic principles and essential objectives of the Board's work have not changed. The changes in its work over the three decades have been mainly in the methods and breadth of the dissemination of its findings in the management and economic areas to the younger as well as the senior members of the management team, to the country's educators and clergymen, to the American public, and to management in foreign countries.

Not only has dissemination of the Board's factual findings been broadened, it has also been intensified. This has been done through the expansion of its courses and seminars and through a reorganization of its "Ask The Conference Board" information service.

The courses and seminars operated by the Board are either staffed by or closely supervised by its Research Specialists, who are full-time members of THE CONFERENCE BOARD's staff. This means that each participant is given the benefit of a carefully planned and progressive curriculum and of the latest research findings of the Board as distinguished from the Round-Table Conferences which present the views of outside specialists and authorities on a wide range of subjects.

The oldest of the Board's seminars is the "Introduction to Personnel Administration," in which a group of not more than fifty executives spend two weeks of intensive study of personnel policies and problems. This course is held four times each year. To date, 486 companies have sent 749 executives to these sessions where the Staff of the Board's Division of Personnel Administration acts as the faculty. The practical benefits from this course are attested by the fact that 23 companies have sent from 5 to 14 of their executives to study the latest developments in personnel management.

Nearly one thousand executives have attended the other three courses recently introduced by the Board. These cover such subjects as Conference Leadership, Organization Planning, and the Atomic Energy Course for Management. In the coming year it is planned to inaugurate another course, a Management Seminar on Company Contributions, and, as research progresses in the future, the Board plans to organize courses in collective bargaining techniques, and in marketing research.

I should emphasize once again that these courses and seminars are in no sense a departure in principle from the work that the Board has been carrying on for four decades. They are merely an extension of its research product from the printed word to the give and take of the seminar method.

The second area developed by the Board in recent years is the intensification of its information services. Indexes and catalogs of Board publications have been issued during the past year to insure more effective use of its resources by industry and by educators. But for subjects not covered in the Board's publications, it is our hope that every company associated with the Board will feel free to "Ask The Conference Board" whenever a problem arises in the fields of business economics, human relationships, and managerial techniques. During the past year inquiries of this kind totaled 29,414, and these included a large number of personal conferences between Staff Specialists and company executives. In the future we hope that, if our resources permit, this information service can be extended to students, teachers, clergymen and other thought-leaders so that everyone who is interested may more clearly comprehend the facts of our American economic system and the policies and practices followed by American industrial management.

The Board has continued its practice of making its colored weekly charts, Road Maps of Industry, available upon request to Conference Board Councillors and Founders chat with outgoing Chairman Langbourne M. Williams, President, Freeport Sulphur Company. L. to R., Irving S. Olds, Director, United States Steel Corporation; Walter Drew, former General Counsel, National Erectors' Association, and a Founder of the Board; Mr. Williams; Eugene Meyer, Chairman of the Board, The Washington Post Company; Dr. John J. secondary school teachers and to clergymen. Well over one million of these charts have been sent to teachers and over one hundred thousand to clergymen during the past year. To an ever-increasing extent, both college and high school textbooks are making use of charts and facts developed by Conference Board research. Special kits of economic materials are made available to the Summer Workshops that have become so popular among high school teachers, and the Board's publications are offered free upon request to all State Superintendents of Education.

In the college field, the Board's publications are made available to instructors and professors at special educational rates. At the end of the year 192 colleges and universities subscribed a nominal amount each in order to receive all our publications. A second educational catalog was mailed during the year to professors of economics, government, business administration, labor relations and allied courses. It is the Board's intention to extend and intensify, as funds are available, its efforts to bring better understanding of economic facts and business policies to the millions of students who will be the workers, planners, and voters of tomorrow.

While conferences, courses, and educational work are an important part of the Board's activities, its main and basic purpose is, and will remain, as set forth in its certificate of incorporation, "to organize, conduct and maintain scientific research and investigation in the fields of business economics and business management." It is research work that takes the preponderant share of THE CONFERENCE BOARD dollar and the greatest part of the time of the Staff. Research also forms the backbone of its conference, educational and information work. The results of this research are sent to all companies associated with the Board through its published studies in Labor Statistics, Business Economics, Business Policy, and Personnel Policy, and in its monthly periodicals, The Business Record and the Management Record.

The Board is about to inaugurate a new series entitled The Conference Recorder, which will bring to its Associates the best thinking that has developed in its conferences on various important topics of more than transient interest. The first of these will be issued shortly on the subject of corporate donations.

Dr. Erwin D. Canham, Editor, The Christian Science Monitor, speaking on "Communication: Essential Ingredient of Dynamic Capitalism," at the 40th Annual Meeting. On the dais are Dr. Gaylord P. Harnwell, President, University of Pennsylvania, and Herman W. Steinkraus, Conference Board Trustee and Chairman of the Board and President, Bridgeport Brass Company

The operations of the Board's Canadian office in Montreal are progressing in a satisfactory way. The Board's Canadian Council (see page 79) has been most helpful in the development of this relatively new activity, which is affording a closer liaison between the business interests of the United States and Canada. Quarterly economic reports on Canada are published in The Business Record and a chart book of Canadian activity similar to that published by the Board for the United States will shortly be available to all Associates. The Canadian Staff presently numbers 7 and 139 Canadian companies and organizations are now Subscribing Associates.

The Board's influence is rapidly extending beyond Canada and the United States. Since the war hundreds of foreign businessmen have visited our offices—both individually and in teams—to study our operations. The Staff has conducted studies in Western Europe and South America. Many distinguished foreigners have attended the Board's courses and conferences in the United States. The Foreign Correspondents (see page 77) are now considering ways in which the Board's resources can be made still more effective toward bringing about that more complete understanding which I mentioned in the first part of my report.

One way in which the Board's influence is being extended abroad is through increased mailings to those executives of associated companies who are located in foreign countries. More and more companies are realizing the advantage of keeping their foreign executives posted on business conditions and corporate practices at home and are asking THE CONFERENCE BOARD to send pertinent material to these expatriates.

The Board's Finances

Although salaries and other costs continue to rise, the Board last year, as usual, lived within its income. This, however, does not mean that it had the funds to operate with maximum effectiveness. There are many areas within its scope where research and study would be worthwhile to its Associates and to the economy as a whole, but these can be explored only as funds are made available.

In an effort to bring home the realization that it will be to industry's advantage to expand the Board's resources, the Trustees authorized a special drive for additional support this year in connection with its Fortieth Anniversary. Mr. Andrew W. Robertson, a past Chairman of the National Industrial Conference Board and for many years one of its Councillors and Trustees, consented to act as Chairman of the Fortieth Anniversary Development Fund. Members and friends of the Board have already accepted regional chairmanships in each of 24 areas and in eleven of these areas campaigns are well under way for increased contributions. The early results of this drive have been encouraging, as more Asso ciates are made more sharply aware of the financial tightness under which the Board operates.

Income from contributions and subscriptions for the fiscal year ended April 30, 1956, was $1,631,000, an increase of only 6% over that of the preceding year. It is this figure which is the basic budgetary income that the Board hopes to increase substantially in the coming year. Other operating income of about $400,000 represents mainly reimbursement of costs of supplying additional publications, undertaking special research projects for Associates, and conducting conferences, seminars, and courses.

The principal of the Reserve Fund showed a small increase, but now stands at only one-third of the subscription income. As authorized by the Trustees, the interest accumulated in this Fund was utilized during the past year to defray the costs of moving, furnishing, and equipping the Board's new offices at 460 Park Avenue (57th Street). It has always been the hope of the Trustees that the Reserve Fund would equal one year's subscription income so that the Board could better weather any period of depression without drastically curtailing its helpfulness to Associates and to the public.

Composition of the Board

The Board consists of its Subscribing and Cooperating Associates, Affiliated Organizations and Foreign Correspondents; its Members, Councillors, Officers, Trustees and Official Committees; its Advisory Councils; its Conference Participants; and the 200 full-time employees who constitute its Research, Service and Administrative Staff. Each of these parts of the organization adds to the over-all effectiveness of the Board's research and educational work.

At the end of the year, the Board itself was made up of twenty Members Emeriti, twenty-eight Representatives of Affiliated Organizations, eighteen Councillors, nineteen Foreign Correspondents, and 247 Regular Members. Subscribing Associates of the Board totaled 3,519. All these are listed in Part II of this Report.

In addition to its various Standing Committees, the following Advisory Councils were active throughout the year, and their compositions are listed in Part II.

Advisory Council on Personnel Administration

Council on Organization Planning
Council on Development, Education and Training
Council on Wage and Salary Administration

In closing I want to say to all of the Board's Associates that the results of its research and conference activities have been used more widely during the past year than ever before—by Associates, by educators, and by the public. I believe that the funds made available to it have been spent to the best advantage and assure you that it will be the number one task of the Trustees and Officers to make sure that any increases in its income will be used just as prudently. As I have so often said, we are not striving for growth merely for the sake of growing, but because we see so many opportunities to use the facilities that the Board has built up over forty years for the further strengthening of American business both at home and throughout the civilized world.

Such progress as the Board has made has been possible only through the unselfish interest of its Trustees, Board Members, Councils, Associates, and Cooperators, to all of whom I express my deepest appreciation. With their continued helpfulness the Board can move ahead in its efforts to protect and strengthen through scientific and objective research the economies of the United States and Canada, and to explain the significance of our business organization to our friends abroad.

Respectfully submitted,

May, 1956

JOHN S. SINCLAIR, President

Conference Board Meetings

1955-1956

The Board's 40th Anniversary Conference year opened last summer in San Francisco with a conference on electronics and automation jointly sponsored by THE CONFERENCE BOARD and the Stanford Research Institute. This was followed by the highly successful September meeting on "Better Profits Through Better Selling"—third in the series on marketing and sales problems. The 4th Annual Conference on Atomic Energy in Industry drew the largest number of Associates and guests of any meeting in the series. This was due not only to the continued interest in the subject but also to the high caliber of speakers. On the agenda were more than one hundred nuclear authorities from the United States and more than a dozen foreign nations, including the Soviet Union.

Conferences were held in Philadelphia and Atlanta for the first time. Their enthusiastic reception attested once more to the wisdom of holding Conference Board meetings in the large metropolitan areas outside New York.

The 40th Anniversary Meeting was held in New York in May to mark the occasion of the founding of the Board. Sessions on the three meeting days were devoted to a discussion of the many facets of "Dynamic Capitalism." A number of outstanding speakers and leading authorities participated on this occasion.

The schedule for 1956-1957 will include second meetings in St. Louis and San Francisco as well as the regular open meetings in New York in September, January, and May, and the Board Member conferences in October, December, February, and April. An important innovation in the Board's conference activity will be the Fifth Atomic Energy Conference which will be held in conjunction with the Annual Meeting of the Joint Engineering Council at Convention Hall in Philadelphia on March 14 and 15. In order to cut down the increasing number of overlapping conferences in the atomic energy field, THE CONFERENCE BOARD has joined with the Council to hold all sessions in the same week. This will eliminate duplication of subject matter, develop greater interest in the atomic energy equipment display and provide a common meeting place at one time for all who are interested in this vitally important and rapidly growing field of industrial development.

The complete Conference Schedule for 1956-1957 appears on page 47.

TREASURER'S REPORT

For the Fiscal Year Ended April 30, 1956

To Members and Associates of THE CONFERENCE BOARD:

Included in this report are financial statements of the NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL CONFERENCE BOARD, INC., for the fiscal year ended April 30, 1956. As usual, these statements are certified by independent auditors whose engagement is authorized annually by our Trustees.

During the Board's fortieth fiscal year which ended April 30, 1956, Operating Fund income was $2,036,558, and expenses were $2,035,344, leaving a Fund balance of $1,214. Among the expenses is a provision of $50,000 for long-range research and development, which will provide for a portion of the expenses of the Board's Canadian office and for certain other developmental projects. The provision approximates the charges of $51,628 made during the fiscal year against the reserve for long-range research and development.

At April 30, 1956, Operating Fund assets were $1,079,609, with 78% in cash and United States Government securities. Included among liabilities were accounts payable, accrued items, and reserves, $148,080; revenue applicable to subsequent period operations, $914,075; and Operating Fund balance, $17,454.

During the fiscal year just ended, $115,787 of interest accumulated in the Reserve Fund was transferred to the Operating Fund. Authorization for this transfer was given by the Trustees at their regular meeting in April, 1955 to defray the costs of moving and establishing improved office facilities at 460 Park Avenue, New York City.

In the Reserve Fund, the Board received contributions of $9,475 and earned interest in the amount of $11,422. During the fiscal year no expenses were charged against this Fund. However, the Fund balance was reduced by the transfer of $115,787 mentioned above, and at April 30, 1956 the total of Reserve Fund assets was $576,626. Since the Board has no endowment, its Trustees in prior years considered it wise to provide a reserve about equal to one year's expenses. Although the present balance is substantial, it is only one quarter of the Board's budgeted expenses for the present fiscal year.

Respectfully submitted,

JAMES L. MADDEN, Treasurer

AUDITORS' CERTIFICATE

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL CONFERENCE BOARD, INC.
New York, N. Y.

We have examined the financial statements of NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL CONFERENCE BOARD, INC., for the year ended April 30, 1956. Our examination was made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards, and accordingly included such tests of the accounting records and such other auditing procedures as we considered necessary in the circumstances.

In our opinion, the accompanying statement of financial position and the statement of income and expenses present fairly the financial position of NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL CONFERENCE BOARD, INC., at April 30, 1956, and the results of its operations for the year then ended, in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles applied on a basis consistent with that of the preceding year.
