

ALTERNATIVE PROPOSAL.

After further discussion with Dr. George Stephens, Superintendent of the Royal Victoria Hospital, and Principal James, I would like to point out that we have really visualized three huts one above the other, inasmuch as the annex would be without elevators and arranged to use the facilities of each floor of the main structure.

If however there is some insurmountable objection to the construction of three floors, the plan could be changed to two floors as follows: Make a two storey structure in similar position with passage into the two public floors (second and third). Lengthen the building from 95 X 30 feet to 125 X 30 feet. The grounds would just take this and the two floors for officers and serious cases, for 8, making a total of 36. Details would have to be worked out for either scheme.
