

December 5, 1940

Dr. Harold Elliott,
The Radcliffe Infirmary,
Oxford, England

Dear Harold:-

I was delighted to hear from you. What a good idea it was your going up to Oxford to see what Cairns is doing. You should be able to get some work with some of the neurologists there too. Your two suggestions are good ones. I do not know whether we could make them fit into our schedule or not. The South American who is working with you knows more about my movements than I do! Unless I am knocked down and tied I shall not go to South America until the war is over at all events.

Please tell Dr. Cairns that Colonel Bourassa is improving as far as leg movements are concerned, but his arm movements have not improved. He has an unexplained jaundice at the moment. With best regards from all.

Yours very sincerely,

WGP/MM