

30th November 1931.

Letter to Dr. Stengel continued.
Dr. Alfred Stengel,
University of Pennsylvania,
Philadelphia, Pa.

I want to thank you personally for your kindness and the definite clarity with which you presented the whole situation at Philadelphia. I think the University should be complimented upon the fact that they have chosen to include the clinical work there.

Dear Dr. Stengel, You doubtless received my telegram telling you that I had decided to throw in my lot with McGill. This message was sent to you with a great deal of regret. First of all because of the honour which I should have prized so highly of coming to the University of Pennsylvania, and secondly because of my very numerous friends there.

I was forced to this decision because of the fact that friends here at McGill arranged things so that the development of a neurological institute would be possible if we can get Rockefeller help. I feel that it is wrong for a man even to move from one university to another when he can get the facilities for his work which he wants in the place where he is already established. Perhaps the most important factor, however, in bringing me to this decision was the comparative isolation of Montreal and the smallness of things here which will make it possible to devote less time to administration and more to my own particular scientific interests.

I need not enumerate my regrets, for they are many, in not coming to Philadelphia. I told you and I told Dr. Gregg that I would make up my mind before any decision was made by the Rockefeller people, and I have now done so. It is perfectly obvious that if the McGill application for help from the Rockefeller is rejected, they will not be able to develop the scheme on their own. In that case I suppose I shall have to lie in the bed that I have made.

30th November 1931.

Letter to Dr. Stengel continued.

Dr. Alfred Stengel,
University of Pennsylvania,
Philadelphia, Pa.

I want to thank you personally for your kindness and the definite clarity with which you presented the whole situation at Philadelphia. I think the University should be complimented upon the man whom they have chosen to guide the clinical work there.

You doubtless received my telegram telling you that I had decided to throw in my lot with McGill. This message was sent to you with a great deal of regret.

First of all because of the honour which I should have prized so highly of coming to the University of Pennsylvania, and secondly because of my very numerous friends there.

I was forced to this decision because of the fact that friends here at McGill arranged things so that the development of a neurological institute would be possible if we can get Rockefeller help. I feel that it is wrong for a man even to move from one university to another when he can get the facilities for his work which he wants in the place where he is already established. Perhaps the most important factor, however, in bringing me to this decision was the comparative isolation of Montreal and the smallness of things here which will make it possible to devote less time to administration and more to my own particular scientific interests.

I need not enumerate my regrets for they are many, in not coming to Philadelphia. I told you and I told Dr. Gregg that I would make up my mind before any decision was made by the Rockefeller people, and I have now done so. It is perfectly obvious that if the McGill application for help from the Rockefeller is rejected, they will not be able to develop the scheme on their own. In that case I suppose I shall have to live in the bed that I have made.