

THE JOURNAL OF THE AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION regrets the necessity of returning the accompanying manuscript. The return of a paper does not indicate that it is not worthy of publication in THE JOURNAL. In spite of the large space given to original articles, the number received often makes it necessary to return excellent papers; some are returned because they are too long, because the subject treated has already been given sufficient attention in THE JOURNAL, or because the long list of manuscripts on hand would delay too long the publication of those under consideration. The author of the manuscript herewith returned is assured that his article has received careful consideration and that the courtesy of its being submitted to THE JOURNAL for publication is appreciated.